Kati Greff and Jason Leet met while both were consulting on the same project. “I was part of the social crowd, but Jason kept to himself,” Kati remembers. “I kept planning social outings just hoping he would attend.” Finally, Jason (now 29 and a senior consultant) came out one night, and he and Kati (also 29 and a senior project manager) were soon dating. Kati—who had moved to Philadelphia around the time the two met—always wanted to visit the city’s various museums, but she and Jason rarely had time. One day, two-and-a-half years after they’d begun dating, the couple went to the Natural History Museum and then to Love Park, where, appropriately enough, Jason asked Kati to marry him. Afterward, the two went home and Jason told Kati to get dressed up—a limo waited outside to take them on a scenic drive around Philly, followed by dinner at the Four Seasons. —K.W.
